

SON FIVE
ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL
OF CROFTFOOT

The most notable Black was William, who, after beginning his literary career on the staff of the Glasgow Evening Citizen, migrated to London, and, as journalist and author of many novels, gained an immortal name as an exponent of Scottish life and scenery. Born in 1841 he was the grandson of Robert Black and Agnes Somervell.

MELODIES AND MEMORIES - PAGES 211-213

Robert, fifth Liltie-co-kee son, with his wife, Jane Sommerville, lived at Croftfoot. The sons were William, John, James, and one daughter named Martha. William's wife was Margaret Lithgow. They had four sons and three daughters. Robert, the eldest, farmed East Longridge, afterwards going to Milwaukee as a farmer. James became a Canadian farmer, having sons and daughters. One of the sons, James Lawson Black, became a pressman in Trenton, Nebraska. Thomas Porteous, second son of William, had as his wife, Helen, daughter of A. Bryce, Hen-nest. With a family of eight sons and three daughters, they lived at East Whitburn. Four sons became C. R. servants, passing from the lower to the higher grades, with much credit to themselves. William, the eldest, had nine sons and five daughters, several of the former being railwaymen. Alexander had two sons in railway service. Robert went long ago to Arkansas, served in the civil war, and has filled many public offices. He had many sons and daughters. Thomas went many years ago, as schoolmaster, to Forfarshire, having one son and two daughters. George has long served the C.R. Coy., being now District Superintendent at Aberdeen, having three sons and six daughters living. John, from a humble capacity, became Station auditor in the C. R. service.

John, second Croftfoot son, married to Janet Strathearn, was tailor in Harthill. There were eight children:- Robert, architect, Glasgow; John, of Bell & Black, match manufacturers, London -John Rankine Black, B.A., Barrister of Inner Temple, being son of last named John Black. William, a joiner, was third Harthill son; Elizabeth came next, then James, followed by Agnes, afterwards by Mary Strathearn, married to Hugh Reid, their descendants being now in Glasgow. The above lady died in 1904, aged eighty-three years. There was a son of John's named Thomas, regarding whom there are no particulars. Robert, a son of James mentioned above, with his family, lives in Glasgow, and possesses many facts, figures, and relics pertaining to his kindred, who, at home and abroad, have earned a goodly share of credit. Various other descendants of John, of Harthill, also have their abode in Glasgow.

James, second Croftfoot son, became tailor and clothier in Trongate, Glasgow. The most notable of his family of sons and daughters was William, who, after beginning his literary career on the staff of the Glasgow Evening Citizen, migrated to London, and, as journalist and author of many novels, gained an immortal name as an exponent of Scottish life and scenery. In our own country and in many other countries his books have a deservedly enthusiastic popularity, and are, because of their truth and purity, likely to be always regarded with favour. "A Daughter of Heth," "Madcap Violet," "A Princess of Thule," "Far Lochaber," and "Macleod of Dare," are worthy examples of his literary talent. William Black was a prolific writer, and altogether wrote more than thirty volumes. He died in December 1898, aged fifty-seven years.

*Reminder: * as JB didn't mention this individual, their story ends in the table whereas ^ tells you there is another generation within this document.*

The accompanying tree however might show several more generations than is in this narrative.

ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

Residence - Croftfoot, Whitburn, West Lothian

Robert, fifth Liltie-co-kee son, with his wife, Jane [Agnes] Somervell, lived at Croftfoot. The sons were William, John, James, and one daughter named Martha.

ROBERT BLACK

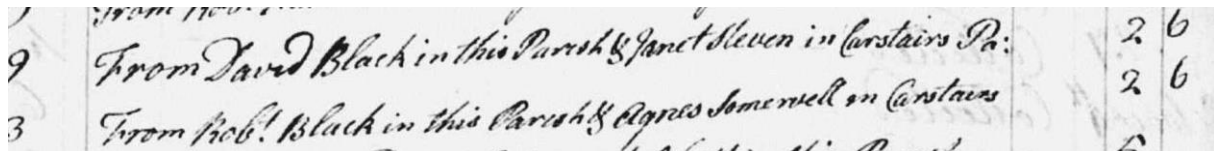

Robert is the only child of William Black and Mary Tod that no baptism can be found. It is estimated he was born around 1739 at either Liltie-co-kee or Cleughhead. He seems averse to church records (but not religion!) as we can find very few documents for this family.

AGNES SOMMERVEL

Robert's wife was Agnes, not Jane, as stated by JB. Her most likely baptism has been identified as 30 November 1747 in Carnwath to parents James Sommervel and Marion Muir but we caution that the marriage proclamation stated she was from Carstairs. An extract that follows states she was fluent in French and taught her children the language.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Robert was 28 when he married Agnes on 23 August 1767. His younger brother had married two weeks before him.

Parish marriage records - Whitburn, West Lothian.

No records were found for the birth of their four known children, so the years have been estimated from census records where possible. The only known daughter, Martha, was specifically named by JB but we have no further knowledge about her.

Croftfoot is centre right and not far from Breich Water.

John Thomson's Atlas of Scotland, 1832.

Croftfoot is today a privately owned wood, open to the public.

As Robert and Agnes's grandson became an important Scottish writer, the following was written about the upbringing of James, their youngest son. It gives a valuable insight into life at Croftfoot and possibly reflects the upbringing 'enjoyed' by all the Blacks of Breich Water.

Although his [James] schooling had been no better than that usually enjoyed by the son of a small farmer, he had educated himself so well, and they should be deported to a foreign country! The elder that he could read the Greek Testament and had even some knowledge of Hebrew. French he had been taught as a boy on the lonely farm at Carnwath Moor, for his mother, with a provident care for the future unusual even in Scotland, had caused all her children to be taught French in case Napoleon's invading army should find footing on British Black's religion was deeply tinged with the melancholy of his race and sect. He had the Puritan's dread of many forms of pleasure that now seem innocent enough, and the world in which his son was destined to play his part seemed to him to be a place of darkness and sin. William Black, Novelist: A Biography Wemyss Reid

If the 'pleasures' denied to the Black children were innocent enough at the time this was written, we wonder what these activities were that were frowned on by Robert.

DEATH AND BURIAL

No burial was found for Robert and for that reason we have recorded his burial conservatively as 'after 1785'; the date reflects the birth of their youngest child. For Agnes, to teach her children French, she must have lived longer, and we have extended the date to 'after 1800'.

SECOND GENERATION

WILLIAM BLACK AND MARGARET LITHGOW

Residence - Croftfoot, Whitburn, Lanark
East Longridge Whitburn, West Lothian

William's wife was Margaret Lithgow. They had four sons and three daughters.
Robert, James... Thomas Porteous

WILLIAM BLACK

William we estimate was born around 1769 at Croftfoot, Whitburn.

MARGARET LITHGOW

From her age at death, Margaret was born in 1777. As she gave Lawson and Porteous as middle names to her children, we looked to these as possibilities for her mother's name but none were obvious.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

William married Margaret Lithgow circa 1806 so this would mean William was around 37 and Margaret 29. Melodies and Memories stated the couple had four sons but named only three. The missing son proved to be William. The three daughters were also unnamed and we have identified only two. Based on census records the family lived in Whitburn, possibly East Longridge as suggested by JB.

DEATH AND BURIAL

William was buried around the age of 60 in Whitburn on 6 April 1829; Margaret's death was recorded at the age of 62 on 11 October 1839 in Glasgow. William Black was named as her deceased husband.

Parish burial records – Glasgow, Lanark.

JOHN BLACK AND JANET STRATHEARN

Residence - Harthill, Shotts, Lanark

John, second Croftfoot son, married to Janet Strathearn, was a tailor in Harthill. There were eight children: Robert... John... William... Elizabeth... James... Agnes... Mary Strathearn... Thomas.

JOHN BLACK

John was born about 1778 at Croftfoot, Whitburn. He was a tailor who lived all his married life in Harthill, a small village only a few miles from Whitburn, but lying in the parish of Shotts.

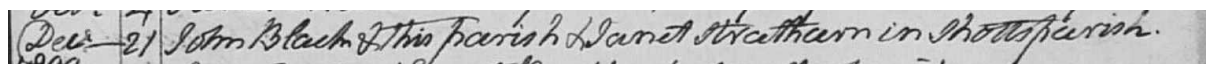

JANET STRATHEARN

Janet was baptised in Shotts on 6 October 1776 to parents John Stratherne and Elisabeth Clark. Again, spellings vary.

¹JB is confusing at times. It was decided that James Lawson Black, the pressman in Trenton Nebraska, was probably the son of James the Canadian Farmer.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

John and Janet married on 21 December 1799 in Cambusnethan but the banns were also read in Shotts. Perhaps John undertook an apprenticeship in Cambusnethan for the marriage to be proclaimed there.

Parish marriage records - Cambusnethan, Lanark.

Parish marriage records - Shotts, Lanark.

Several of John and Janet's eight children had remarkable achievements and these are noted later. JB named all of their children correctly.

JAMES BLACK, CATHERINE LEVIES AND CAROLINE CONNING

Residence - Trongate, Glasgow

James, second [third] Croftfoot son, became a tailor and clothier in Trongate, Glasgow. The most notable of his family of sons and daughters was William....

JB erred when recording James as he was actually the third Croftfoot son. He was born around 1785 and like his brother John, he too was a tailor but he had moved to Glasgow before he married. Perhaps he was escaping his father's 'Puritan's dread of many forms of pleasure' as mentioned by his son's biographer. Cathcart is now included in Glasgow city but would have been of more rural in nature then. Melodies and Memories mentioned James's son William the novelist but failed to record the names of James's two wives and his many other children, but then again, tragically nearly all of them died young.

SON-5-ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

KATHERINE LEVIES

The marriage records indicate Katherine was a Levies (as opposed to a Lewis or Lavis) from Carluke so although no birth was found for her around 1787, we suspect her parents were James Levies and Margaret Steven, as a James Levies was born to this couple in Carluke in 1794. Birth records of Catherine's children and grandchildren give several variations of this surname.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

James and Katherine married on 10 August 1811 at Cathcart when James was 26.

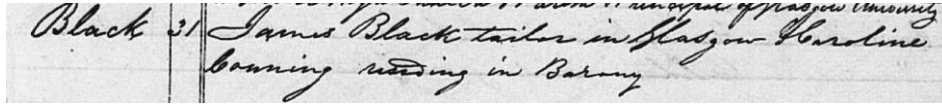

Parish marriage records - Cathcart, Glasgow, Lanark.

James's death certificate tells a terrible tale of this family, as of the eleven children born to James and Katherine only two outlived their father (Robert and James). Rhesus negative is a layman's diagnosis for this family's tragedies but realistically this is just a wild guess. The certificate is shown below but it is very difficult to read as the death years are obscured and other supporting records are missing or incomplete.

CAROLINE CONNING

By 1835 Katherine had died and James, at the age of 51, married Caroline Conning a 27-year-old English born woman, on 31 January 1836. We are not sure of her parentage.³

Parish marriage records - Barony, Lanark.

Five children were born to his second wife and three survived.

³ In 1841 there were several Conning families living in Whitehorn, Wigtown, and the only Conning in Glasgow was a 70-year-old saddler James Conning. This is likely Caroline's father. In 1871 a Caroline Black, born in England, of the right age was visiting a family in Whitehorn.

By 1851 all the surviving children from his first marriage had left home and the last two of James's second family had been born. The family were living at 22 Trongate Street. James was described as a master tailor, employing four men. Because of the fame of his son we know much more about James's character than other members of the family.

[William's] father James Black was a gentle and studious person fond of books and devoted in the quiet undemonstrative Scotch fashion to his children of whom William was one of the younger. The eldest was a boy named James while between him and William came a sister [Wilhelmina] whose character in the coming years was to be drawn for the outer world by Black himself in the person of Queen Tita. The eldest son James died nearly twenty years before his more distinguished brother but some traits of his character were preserved by Black in his portrait of James Drummond the hero of Madcap Violet. William Black, Novelist: A Biography Wemyss Reid

James died in 1855 at the age of 70. For one year only, this very full death format was used, so the tragedy of this family's births and deaths (although difficult to read) are listed.

did not positively forbid his children to read fiction, but the only novels he permitted in his house were Scott's, and even these were only tolerated as a special favor. There was little, therefore, in Black's home in his early days to smooth the way to his future calling. William Black, Novelist: A Biography Wemyss Reid

On his death, a notice to debtors and creditors was placed in the press.

Robert Black was James's son; they had the same occupation, but obviously worked apart.

After James's death, the family moved to a new home and took in boarders. The two Lawson women were not daughters of James Black as transcribed by Ancestry.

Caroline, needless to say, survived her husband by many years and later went to live in England with her son William the novelist.

Mrs Black the mother of the novelist survived her husband for many years and lived to see her son William at the height of his fame and in the fullest enjoyment of his prosperity Like her husband she was a devoted parent and very proud of the talents of her son It was delightful later in life to hear her talk of the novelist to congenial friends who shared her admiration for him. Transplanted from Glasgow to London where she found herself amid strange surroundings she clung naturally to those who had associations with her old home or with similar scenes. But her deep affection for her son enabled her to hold her own in the society of men of letters to which she was introduced through him. Many can remember the fine old Scots lady whose pride in her boy never betrayed itself in any fashion that jarred upon those around her and whose shrewdness of judgment led her to select unerringly among the many strangers with whom she was brought in contact the men and women who were most worthy of her friendship. Her mingled simplicity and quickness was a fair indication of the atmosphere of the home in which William Black spent his boyhood. William Black, Novelist: A Biography Wemyss Reid

According to one census, Caroline was not 'Scots' and she died in Camberwell in the June quarter of 1878. Her burial place is unknown.

THIRD GENERATION

CHILDREN OF WILLIAM BLACK AND MARGARET LITHGOW

ROBERT BLACK AND JANET L UNKNOWN

Residence - East Longridge, West Lothian
Lisbon, Waukesha, Wisconsin, USA

Robert, the eldest, farmed East Longridge, afterwards going to Milwaukee as a farmer.

ROBERT BLACK

Robert was born around 1807 in Whitburn and indeed, exactly as written, Robert was found on the 1841 census as a farmer at East Longridge. He lowered his age as required to 30 and also living in the household was a male and female servant. The following year he was living in America and probably married.

JANET L UNKNOWN

All we know is that Janet or Jannette or Jenette was born around 1814 in Scotland.⁴

MARRIAGE

No marriage was found for Robert in Scotland between 1841 and June 1842 when he sailed to New York. In 1848 he was naturalised as an American citizen.

⁴ Robert's servant in 1841 was Jane Bishop. We can't locate what happened to her so she may be the 'Janet' in Wisconsin.

On the 1850 census Robert was living at Lisbon, Waukesha, Wisconsin aged 44, born in Scotland along with Janet L Black aged 36, born in Scotland and Charles H Black aged 14, born in England. This last person is a mystery also.

By 1855 it must have been evident to Robert that he and Janet were to remain childless and we believe he wrote to his younger brother Thomas Porteous Black, offering to pay the fare for one of his sons to come and work for him and be his 'heir'. As a result Thomas's thirteen year old son, also named Robert, travelled to Wisconsin in 1855. The 1860 Census (01 June 1860) from Lisbon, Waukesha, Wisconsin, records:

William	1	0
Robert Black	53	"		Farmer	3100	500	Scotland

Five years later this nephew was still living with him but by 1870 he had married and left his uncle's property.

DEATH AND BURIAL

Robert and Janet (or Jeanette) were found on the 1870 census but had died before 1880.

AGNES BLACK AND DAVID PATON

Residence - Stirling, Stirlingshire

[William Black and Margaret Lithgow] had... three daughters. [Agnes]

AGNES BLACK

SON-5-ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

Agnes was one of the unnamed daughters mentioned by JB. Although the 1841 census transcription shows she was born in England she was born in Whitburn around 1811. Agnes became a milliner in Stirling, and it was here she gave birth to her daughter Mary, who was nine-years-old on the 1841 census. The pair resided at 19 Baker Street, Stirling with an apprentice milliner and a servant also in the household.

DAVID PATON

Nothing is known about this person and in the records we can obtain, he was never shown living with Agnes.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Agnes's marriage to David Paton, the father of her child, is not located, and the baptism of their only child shows she was baptised as Mary Black Paton, but neither Agnes nor Mary used the surname Paton on any census records.

Ten years later, in 1851, Agnes gave her birthplace as Whitburn and there were now two nieces living with her, one being the daughter of her brother Thomas Porteous. As Thomas married Helen Bryce we assume Mary Bryce was more accurately her sister-in-law's niece.

On this document, Agnes is described as the widow of David Paton. John Robertson her 'nephew-in-law' was the informant. His relationship to Agnes is yet to be proven.

THOMAS PORTEOUS BLACK AND HELEN BRYCE

Residence – Longridge, Whitburn, West Lothian
East Whitburn, West Lothian

Thomas Porteous, second son of William, had as his wife, Helen, daughter of A. Bryce, Hen-nest. With a family of eight sons and three daughters, they lived at East Whitburn. Four sons became C.R. servants, passing from the lower to the higher grades, with much credit to themselves.

THOMAS PORTEOUS BLACK

Thomas was born about 1814 in Whitburn. The reason for his middle name is unknown but at least four Thomas Porteous Blacks were named after him.

HELEN 'ELLEN' BRYCE

Helen was the daughter of Alexander Bryce and Marion Russell and was born 28 November 1817. Hens Nest Road today is in East Whitburn.

In 1871, with both parents dead, Margaret, the eldest daughter was the head of house and she was also employed as a daily governess. Of the thirteen children, most died before they were 30 and we can confirm marriages for only two. The cause of death recorded in the cemetery registers was generally consumption.

JAMES BLACK

Residence - Canada

James became a Canadian farmer, having sons and daughters.

James was born on 6 February 1821 in Whitburn. We can't find him in Canada and after many readings of Melodies and Memories we have decided (rightly or wrongly) to interpret JB's reference to the 'pressman in Trenton, Nebraska' as being this James's son Robert was an architect so is well documented.

There is no record of his training but his early work, particularly the Bank in Stirling, is very close in style to the later work of David Hamilton. As he named his youngest son Hamilton just after that architect's death, some association with him, whether as apprentice or assistant, can be inferred. Black commenced practice in Glasgow in the late 1820s. By 1838 he had become architect to the Union Bank. In 1843 he formed a partnership with James Salmon (born 1805), who had obtained an apprenticeship with John Brash and commenced practice in Glasgow, reputedly in a Trongate basement, c.1825. Black lost his Union Bank position to William Railton of Kilmarnock in 1852, and his partnership with Salmon was dissolved in or about the following year. Thereafter Black entered a short-lived partnership with civil engineer Alexander George Thomson. Black remained in practice until his death from paralysis and bronchial problems on 6 December 1869 at 116 Sauchiehall Street which was both house and office. He was buried at Glasgow Necropolis, Omega lair 17. His wife Violet Woodrow had predeceased him on 24 February 1852, aged 40. They had six children, Violet, John who emigrated to Australia, Janet (usually known as Jessie), Robert who died aged 1 year, Robert (named after his deceased sibling) and Hamilton who died 9 November 1919. 'The Architect's Engineer's and Building

'Trades Directory' (1868) recorded him as having designed 'upwards of twenty churches', of which only six have been identified.⁵

Importantly, Robert in 1840, designed the Longridge Church; the place of worship of so many of his cousins. The spire (later removed) was reportedly exceedingly high. The building is now a private home.

DEATH AND BURIAL

Violet died on 15 February 1852, luckily before seeing her husband go to jail for non-payment of his debts. Interestingly her name was given as Wood not Woodrow.

DEATHS.

At 16 Grafton Street, on the 15th instant, Violet Wood, wife of Mr Robert Black, architect.—Friends will please accept of this intimation.

In 1861, Robert was residing in the North Prison in Glasgow; he was described as a debtor with the occupation of architect. His birth place was given as Shotts and he was 57. Robert died on 6 December 1869.

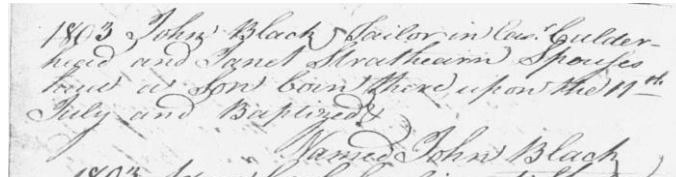

JOHN BLACK AND MARY ROBERTSON DALTON

Residence – London, England

John of Bell & Black, match manufacturers, London. John Rankine Black, B.A., Barrister of Inner Temple, being son of last named John Black.

JOHN BLACK

John was born on 11 July 1803, Harthill and he trained as an accountant.

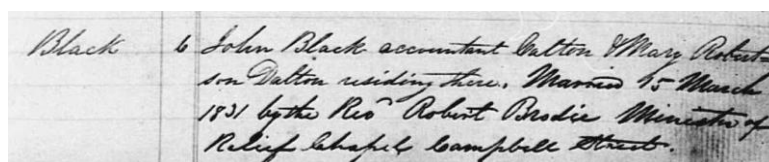

Church records – Shotts, Lanark.

MARY ROBERTSON DALTON

Mary, despite marrying in Scotland, claimed on the census she was born in England around 1811 but this birth isn't found.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

John was 27 when he married Mary Robertson Dalton in Barony in 1831. She was twentyish.

Church records – Barony, Lanark.

SON-5-ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

The couple moved to London and it was here that their three children were born. When their first son was born in 1832, John was a coal merchant and they were living at Shoreditch.

John then entered a partnership with Richard Bell.

In 1832 Richard Bell began a match business in London which in one form or another, and in one country or another, still flourishes to this day. It was most likely his matches the pioneers brought with them in the 1840s and it was his matches they largely carried on using all the way through, along with one or two other brands. Richard Bell had a partner in the earlier years and the resulting Bell and Black boxes represent 13% of all matches imported between 1870 and 1894 when New Zealand's own match industry was set up. After about 1880 the use of the name "Black" was found to be discontinued and the inscription on the match box lids then read simply "R Bell and Co. London."⁶

Residence Unknown

William, a joiner, was third Harthill son

WILLIAM BLACK

William, born 6 March 1806 at Shotts, was difficult to locate but we are now sure we have the right person. Some Ancestry trees have him marrying Mary Boyle but marriage and death certificates show this was not our William.

JANET YOUNG

Janet was born about 1810 but nothing else is known of her.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

The marriage appears in the indexes twice, one for Glasgow and one for Barony but both were dated 9 September 1834. William would have been 28. Three children were found.

Violet was an unusual name at the time but as this was the name of William's sister-in-law we believe this is the correct family. In 1841 William was a wright. We don't have the original census but William should have been recorded as 35 and we doubt five year old Janet was born in England.

JAMES BLACK AND UNKNOWN

Residence – possibly Shotts, Lanark and Glasgow

...then James...

Robert, a son of James mentioned above, with his family, lives in Glasgow, and possesses many facts, figures, and relics pertaining to his kindred, who, at home and abroad, have earned a goodly share of credit.

James's birth was found in Shotts in 1810.

SON-5-ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

In 1841 he was likely living in Glasgow with the occupation of shoemaker and boarding with the Wood family. Due to the burial entry below, we haven't recorded a marriage to Margaret Barrowman, though Melodies and Memories states James did marry and had a son Robert living in Glasgow in 1909. If any descendants can enlighten us, we would love to solve this conundrum.

Agnes was born on 11 November 1815 in Shotts.

1812 in Shotts also. His likely parents were John Pate and Mary McArthur. There is a Pate's Hill south of Addiewell which may be connected to his family.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Agnes and William married on 16 March 1834 in Shotts when they were around the age of eighteen. Their first child was born before they married and baptised before the nuptials. They were living at 8 Bute Place, Ardrossan; Hugh was a carpenter employing five others. DEATH AND BURIAL

Hugh died in 1872 in Glasgow. The claim made in Melodies and Memories that Mary was 83 when she died in 1904, aligns with the death indexes.

CHILDREN OF JAMES BLACK, CATHERINE LEVIES AND CAROLINE CONNING

James's death certificate listed fifteen children to his two wives but only six lived to adulthood and only his son William was named by JB.

Probate - Wilhelmina Milroy Morten.

Her daughter Violet Honor Morten was a remarkable young woman who never married, and her story is told below.

Morten, (Violet) Honor (1861–1913), nurse and journalist, was born at Mayfield House, Cheam, Surrey, on 13 November 1861, the only daughter among the four children of John Garrett Morten (1833–1900), a wealthy solicitor, and his second wife, Wilhelmina Milroy, née Black (1837–1907). She was a niece of the novelist William Black. She had two half-siblings by her father's first marriage. As a child she enjoyed playing billiards with Herbert Spencer, a family friend. She reached adulthood in ‘an old Stuart palace’, Ivy Hall, Richmond, Surrey, but eventually rejected the life of ‘a fine lady with nothing to do but pay great attention to dress, fashion, and society’ (Friedrichs, 304)

Aged twenty, Morten began nurse's training at the London Hospital under Eva Lückes, practised as a volunteer from 1885 to 1888, and came to accept nursing as her central calling. She gained the midwifery diploma of the London Obstetrical Society. In 1895 she began a course in scientific hygiene at Bedford College, London, and qualified for the certificate in 1896; her highest mark was her physics paper, reflecting her study of astronomical physics just after leaving school. In her later Who's Who entry she listed only astronomy and socialism as her recreations. A steady schedule of journalism, speaking, and international travel characterized Morten's life. She contributed to The Hospital, Daily News, and other periodicals. She also published several classic nursing manuals: her Nurse's Dictionary of Medical Terms and Nursing Treatment (1891) reached an eighth edition by the time of her death. In 1889 she founded the Women Writers' Club with offices in Fleet Street. In the early 1890s she founded a nurses' co-operative and the Association of Asylum Workers. About this time she began to lecture widely on infant care, first aid, family health, and women's rights. Her audiences ranged from Women's Co-operative Guild chapters to the London Ethical Society, and even women prisoners at Wormwood Scrubs—prison reform being another of her causes. About 1896 Morten took up residence in the inner London district of Hoxton. Here she and two college friends established a small settlement along 'unsectarian and socialist lines'. The settlers, both male and female, lived like their neighbours, and kept house for themselves. In her autobiographical From a Nurse's Notebook (1899) she exulted at the local curate's terror of her Chianti, cigarettes, and unorthodox religious views. During these Hoxton years Morten stood, in 1897, for election to the London school board, a powerful body responsible for educating about 660,000 pupils and employing 15,000 teachers. Only twenty-nine women (of a total membership of 326) served on the board during its existence from 1871 to 1903. She came in first among the candidates in her district of Hackney but wisely switched to represent the City when one of her constituents spotted her publicly smoking and raised an outcry. On the school board she advanced radical positions: equal pay for women employees, school nurses in the poorest schools, and better facilities for retarded children. She founded the School Nurses' Society to provide free nursing care for London children. Morten's vigorous campaign to abolish corporal punishment in the schools earned her adverse coverage in teachers' publications.

About 1905 Morten established Oakdene, a Tolstoy-inspired settlement in Rotherfield, Sussex, which was partly funded by donations from Aylmer and Louise Maude, the English translators of Tolstoy's Resurrection. According to a friend the house followed a rule that 'insisted on silence at the breakfast table—on the principle that people are never amiable at breakfast' (Porritt, 136). The settlement was both a country holiday home for disabled children from inner London, each of whom was cared for by an adult settler, and a retreat for adults.

Like others of her generation devoted to serving the poor Morten caught 'the St. Francis spirit' in the 1890s (Porritt, 135). Her religious faith was that of a high-church 'firm Protestant', but she was rather secretive about it. She started writing a life of the Catholic martyr Edward Colman and published anonymously a 'little devotional book' entitled The Enclosed Nun, only revealing its authorship in a later book on St Francis's friend and disciple, St Clare (1912).

Morten, 'militant in spirit' (Votes for Women, 18 July 1913, 621), was a non-militant suffragist. She protested against the disenfranchisement of women by refusing to pay taxes, suffering instead the confiscation and public auctioning of some of her property. According to her friend the journalist Arthur Porritt, Morten submitted to more than one of these auctions in the months just before her death, of throat cancer, at Oakdene on 11 July 1913.

WILLIAM BLACK, AUGUSTUS WENZEL AND EVELINE WALDEN SIMPSON

Residence - London, England
Brighton, England

The most notable of his family of sons and daughters was William, who, after beginning his literary career on the staff of the Glasgow Evening Citizen, migrated to London, and, as journalist and author of many novels, gained an immortal name as an exponent of Scottish life and scenery.

WILLIAM BLACK

William was the famous author mentioned in Melodies and Memories and was also the subject of a biography by Wemyss Reid. As a whole tome has been written about him we need only summarise a few details here. William was born in Glasgow in 1841. He started work as a bookbinder before becoming a fulltime writer.

AUGUSTE CHARLOTTE WENZEL

Auguste was born in Heidelberg, Germany on the 13 December 1842. Her father was Martin Wenzel and her mother Louise Sons.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

William and Auguste married in England in 1865 but sadly Auguste died soon after childbirth at the age of 23.

THE WILLIAM BLACK MEMORIAL BEACON.

The 'William Black Memorial Beacon,' which has been erected on the eastern coast of Mull, was lighted on May 12th, and on that night shone over the Highland seas for the first time. The following is a copy of the telegram which was sent by Mrs Black to all the members of the Committee:—"William Black Memorial Beacon. Lit to-day at three p.m. Thank you.—Black." There was no ceremony, but the following lines, entitled, "The Silence AH," were written for the occasion by Lord Archibald Campbell, and dedicated to the daughters of William Black:—"Here mid the splendour of the dying day, We consecrate this Light in. Love's own way, In silence all.

"It is in silence that the day is born; It is in silence that the day—well worn—. Sinks into night. 'Tis not in silence that deep love is born? It is in silence that deep grief is born- In silence all."

An article in the Christchurch Press (NZ) heralded the erection of a memorial to William Black. With a number of relations in New Zealand we wonder how many realised they were reading about a Black from the Breich Water

William Black Memorial Beacon, Duart.

Wikipedia has the following entry;

William was born to James Black and his second wife Caroline Conning. He was educated to be a landscape painter, a training that influenced his literary life, and as a writer he became celebrated for the detailed and atmospheric descriptions of landscapes and seascapes in novels such as White Wings: A Yachting Romance (1880).

At the age of twenty-three he went to London, after some experience with Glasgow journalism, and joined the staff of The Morning Star, and, later, the Daily News, of which journal he became assistant-editor. He wrote a weekly serial in "The Graphic". During the Austro-Prussian War he acted as a war correspondent.

His first novel, James Merle, appeared in 1864, and had little success. Black later disowned the novel and reputedly bought copies to destroy them. Two further early novels Love or Marriage (1868) and The Monarch of Mincing Lane (1871) did little to advance his career, and all three were omitted from the collected edition of Black's works issued by the publishing firm Sampson Low from 1892.

It was the publication of A Daughter of Heth in 1871 that at once established his popularity. It is the story of a young girl brought up in Catholic France, who comes to live with her more austere Protestant relatives in southern Scotland, and ends with personal tragedy. The travel story The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton followed in 1872, and in 1874 A Princess of Thule was another big success and was later adapted into a musical play, The Maid of Arran, by a young L. Frank Baum.

Retiring from journalism the next year he devoted himself entirely to fiction. Several collections of short stories and a further 22 novels followed; the last – Wild Eelin – in 1898, just before his death on 10 December of that year.

During his own lifetime Black's novels were immensely popular, and were compared favourably with those of Anthony Trollope, though some critics complained that his writings revealed too much his interest in hunting and fishing. However, his fame and popularity did not survive long into the twentieth century. His works were bootlegged in the United States, not being protected by copyright laws. He teamed with such well-known authors as Rudyard Kipling, Thomas Hardy, and Walter Besant to abolish this procedure, resulting in the passing of new laws in 1891, but unlike the others, he held no grudge against those who sold unauthorized copies of his books while it was legal to do so, which made relations easier and friendlier between him and his American publishers. Baum's play was written without regard to copyright courtesy when such was legal: it is uncertain if Black was even aware of its existence, as Reid never mentions it in his biography.

Among his later novels may be mentioned two further "tragic" tales: Madcap Violet (1876) and Macleod of Dare (1879); Sunrise (1881) a novel of international political intrigue; Shandon Bells (1883) largely set in Ireland; Yolande (1883) which in part deals with drug addiction; Judith Shakespeare (1884) a historical novel featuring the playwright's daughter; and The New Prince Fortunatus (1890) a novel of London theatrical life. Friendship with actor Mary Anderson resulted in him stage acting twice, with mute roles known as "thinkers" (in Romeo and Juliet and The Winter's Tale), but his nervousness interrupted the performance.

Black also produced the volume Goldsmith (1878) for Morley's English Men of Letters series.

Black is remembered by a lighthouse built in the form of a Gothic tower "on a spot that he knew and loved, by his friends and admirers from all over the world," as recorded on a carved plaque over the door. The building was erected in 1901 and is still in use as a lighthouse. It stands a mile or so south of Duart Castle, at the eastern extremity of the Isle of Mull.

A collection of sketch-stories, including portions of the suppressed James Merle were published posthumously as With the Eyes of Youth, and Other Sketches (1903).

Family

Black's first wife, Augustus Wenzel, died on 14 May 1866 of a fever contracted not long after the birth of their son, Martin. They had only been married since 8 April 1865. Martin would die on 29 March 1871.

He first met his second wife, Eva Simpson, daughter of Wharton Simpson, a fellow journalist and fellow member of Whitefriars Club, in 1869. He saw her again in 1872 and used her as the basis for Bell in The Phaeton. They were married in April 1874 and she was still alive when Wemyss Reid, who had offered Black a contributor's role on the Leeds Mercury, published his biography. From 1879 until his death he lived at 1 Paston Place, Brighton.

BLACK, William, Signalman, Caledonian Railway, residing at New Park near West Calder, died 4 February 1896, at New Park aforesaid, intestate. Confirmation granted at Edinburgh, 27 March, to Isabella Millar or Black, New Park aforesaid, Executrix dative qua relict. Value of Estate, £98, 15s.

Probate - William Black.

Isabella later went to live in Glasgow. Probably because her son Arnot had not left a will, Isabella in 1919 was required to give a declaration on the current ages and whereabouts of all her children. All but Harry (and of course Arnot) were alive and only Thomas was living out of Scotland.

MARION BLACK AND JOHN HEPBURN

Thomas Porteous ... With a family three daughters. [Marion]

MARION BLACK

Marion was unnamed by JB but she was Thomas Porteous's eldest daughter born on 2 December 1837 in Whitburn. By 1851 she had gone to live with her father's sister Agnes Black in Stirling. In 1851 she was a thirteen year old scholar but by 1861 she was a milliner's assistant working, and still living with her aunt.

JOHN HEPBURN

John was born in 1836 in Kirkcaldy. His father was Arnot Hepburn and his mother Mary Pearson. John was a bookseller.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

John and Marion married on 27 December 1861 in Stirling. Five children were found.

JAMES SCOTT

James was born about 1836 in Scotland. We assume he was widowed, as he appears to have at least one son, Joseph Fleming Scott. James was a ship's carpenter.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Marion and James married in Glasgow a year after John Hepburn died. They moved to Lancashire and young Arnot died here in 1877. By 1881 they were living in Liverpool and Marion had two children to her new husband.

Alexander had two sons in railway service.

ALEXANDER BLACK

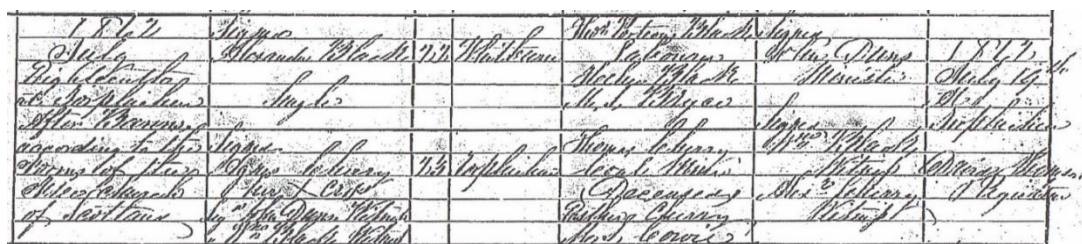

Alexander was born on 8 April 1840 at Longridge.

AGNES ROBERTSON CHERRY

Agnes's birth was not found, but in 1841 she was at Torphichen aged four. Her parents were Thomas Cherry and Esther Cowie. She later gave her birthplace as Bathgate and sometimes used the middle name Robertson.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

The couple married on 18 July 1862.

Marriage certificate – Alexander Black and Agnes Cherry.

We can find seven children but only three survived, and yes, the 1881 census indicated that there were two sons in the railway service.

ROBERT BLACK, CAROLINE A 'MAGGIE' PALMER AND SARAH JANE FRONABERGER

Residence - Wisconsin, USA
Michigan, USA
Pope, Arkansas, USA
Oklahoma, USA

Robert went long ago to Arkansas, served in the civil war, and has filled many public offices. He had many sons and daughters.

ROBERT BLACK

Robert was born on 24 July 1842 according to an American census record. He was found on the 1851 census in Scotland but left when he was thirteen for America. We are told his Uncle Robert Black offered an opportunity to one of his nephews, and it was young Robert who put up his hand to go. The two didn't know each other in Scotland as his uncle had left for America before young Robert was born. The date of 1855 was confirmed on his naturalisation application and an 1855 Wisconsin State Census for Lisbon, Waukesha, Wisconsin, indicates that Robert was by then living with his uncle and his wife. He remained with the couple until at least 1865 and was recorded in their household on the 1860 census. Robert enrolled in the 48th Wisconsin Infantry at Lisbon on 14 February 1865 to fight for the Union. He was discharged on 19 February 1866 when Company B of the 48th Regiment was disbanded. Robert at this point was 24.

CAROLYN A 'MAGGIE' PALMER

⁷ Alexander Ross Black may have ended up in New Zealand. He married in 1901 in Scotland and had a son by the same name who died in New Zealand.

SON-5-ROBERT BLACK AND AGNES SOMMERVEL

Carolyn was the daughter of King Hiram Palmer and Gertrude Jane Vanderhoff. She was born in Wisconsin on 1 October 1847.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Robert and Maggie married on 13 October 1866 in Waukesha, Wisconsin and Robert gave his parents as Thomas P Black and Ellen on the documentation. Within the next four years he moved from Wisconsin and we find him on the 1870 census farming in Rapid River, Michigan with two of the five children from that marriage.

When Maggie died, Robert married for the second time. His new wife was Sarah Jane Fronaberger. His age was recorded as 25 but he was 35. He and Sarah had five more children in Galla Rock, Pope, Arkansas where he farmed. Pope was a thousand miles south from Michigan so we don't know why he made the move.

MARGARET LITHGOW BLACK AND WILLIAM MACNAIR

Thomas Porteous ... With a family three daughters. [Margaret]

MARGARET LITHGOW BLACK

Margaret's birth was not found and so we were initially unaware that she used a middle name. Her birthdate comes from family and was on 24 October 1844 in Fauldhouse.

Margaret Lithgow Black.

WILLIAM MACNAIR

William was born in Clackmanshire on 18 July 1843, to parents Alexander and Isabella Morrison. The spelling MacNair seems a more common version than McNair though their children were registered with both variations.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Margaret and William married on 19 November 1864 in Stirling. Perhaps, like her sister Marion, she had been living with her aunt Agnes Black.

THOMAS PORTEOUS BLACK AND JANE KATE IRNSIDE

Residence - Cortachy and Clova, Angus

Thomas went many years ago, as schoolmaster, to Forfarshire, having one son and two daughters.

THOMAS PORTEOUS BLACK

Thomas was born on 19 February 1849 at Longridge.

JANE KAIE IRNSIDE

Birth details were not located for Jane but she appears to have been born around 1849 in Aberdeen to parents William Ironside and Jane Fraser.

MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

Thomas's marriage to Jane Kaie Ironside took place in her hometown of Aberdeen on 9 October 1873 when they were both around 24. Thomas and Jane moved to Cortachy where all their children were born and where Thomas lived out his working life as a school teacher. Their first child died in the same year of birth so JB would have been unaware of this child's existence when writing his book.

HENRY BRYCE 'HARRY' BLACK

William, the eldest, had nine sons ...[Henry]...several of the former being railwaymen.

Harry was born in 1889 in East Calder. By 1901 he was living with his six siblings and his widowed mother in Govanhill, Glasgow. Private 10008 enlisted with the National Scots Guards, on 1 September 1914 aged 25 and was reported missing after the fighting on 25 January 1915 at the Battle of la Bassee, France. He is commemorated on Le Touret Memorial and is listed simply as Harry Black. He is also commemorated on his parent's headstone, shown earlier in this document.

ARNOT HEPBURN BLACK

William, the eldest, had nine sons ...[Arnot]...several of the former being railwaymen.

Arnot was the youngest of the fourteen children and born in 1893 in Mid Calder. After Harry was killed in France, Arnot enlisted on the 27 September 1916 at the age of 22 from Glasgow. He was a shipping clerk and joined the Royal Scots Fusiliers in the 8th Battalion. Arnot died on 19 September 1918 at the age of 26. He is commemorated as simply 'A. Black' on the Dorian Memorial in Greece and also on his parent's headstone in Rosyth.

Note: William Black and Isabella Miller had fourteen children. Only five have been outlined here. Four of the girls did not marry and we currently know very little about the others.

DESCENDANTS UNABLE TO BE TRACED FROM MELODIES AND MEMORIES

There was a son of John's named Thomas, regarding whom there are no particulars. Robert, a son of James mentioned above, with his family, lives in Glasgow, and possesses many facts, figures, and relics pertaining to his kindred, who, at home and abroad, have earned a goodly share of credit. Various other descendants of John, of Harthill, also have their abode in Glasgow.
